Black Friday Shopping

Johns, leggings are just a few examples.

Most people don't build up enough energy naturally, so taking in great amounts of sugar and caffeine is also beneficial.

"I usually drink a large coffee and Red Bull throughout the day. I'm very unhealthy," said Morgan, a sophomore. This year, Morgan is going with her friend Marissa Khalifa and Marissa's boyfriend. They are leaving around 7 a.m. on Friday and will stay out most of the morning until they find everything they need.

"I want to get a waffle maker and a Keurig coffee maker for my parents," said Morgan.

All night shopping turns people into tired, anxious, zombies. Foolish arguments and chaos occur when items are scarce on the shelf and in high demand.

"Last year, I witnessed two ladies getting into a yelling argument over a North Face coat," said Morgan. Other issues have been items stolen out of carts while shoppers weren't looking and even people being trampled when doors are first opened.

Over Thanksgiving Break, aside from grading papers and planning school lessons, Mrs. Gabridge spends a great amount of her time shopping with her family. She too has had a chaotic tragedy happen to her.

"One year, my mom didn't shut the trunk all the way and the gifts flew out all over the road," she said. After her mom shared her sob story with both Target and Meijer, they showed their holiday spirit by returning the damaged items and replacing them.

Mrs. Gabridge goes out at 6 a.m. on Friday with her mom and two sisters. It has been a tradition to go out ever since they were in high school and were able to acquire their own money.

Looking for sales and great bargains is how the girls choose what stores to hit. "On Thanksgiving we gather around and scope out all the ads," said Mrs. Gabridge.

The stores they always make sure to hit are Kohl's and Target.
