

Concussions and their impact

By: Nick Thomas
News Editor

When athletes participate in a sporting event, they take the risk of getting an injury and those injuries can be a broken bone or some bumps and bruises.

Or some bumps and bruises on their brain.

There are many ways you can get a concussion and they can vary in seriousness. Concussions can range from minor injuries to very serious injuries.

Junior Andrew Hamel suffered a concussion this year. Hamel, who is on the RHS Varsity Football Team, suffered his concussion during in-game play.

"I was on the kickoff team and I hit a player on the opposing team, Cross-Lex, head to head," said Hamel.

Instantly, Hamel knew something was wrong.

"I forgot my defensive assignments, my eyes were foggy, I couldn't think straight and the third day I had a headache," said Hamel

Hamel was out from football for 10 days. Luckily, Hamel's concussion was a minor one. However it, is still an injury that should be monitored closely because concussions can become more serious if not handled properly.

When Hamel suffered his concussion, he was unaware that he had one. Then Hamel blew a coverage on the next defensive play. Then the coaches took him out of the game as they knew something was wrong.

When Hamel suffered his concussion, the coaches on the sideline went through a series of questions.

"I can't remember most of the questions because I was concussed at the time. One question I can remember is the coaches told me to remember three words, which I don't remember now, and I had to tell them what they were in a few minutes. I was able to remember two of them," said Hamel.

The reason the brain is easily susceptible to concussions is because it isn't protected by much.

"What you have for protection of the brain is a thin layer of Cerebrospinal fluid, then the skull," said

Anatomy teacher, Mr. Schleder.

This is why the brain can easily get a concussion and when the brain does get concussed, many things happen.

"When a part of your body gets hit, it bruises and swells, but when the brain gets a hard hit, it bruises, but there is no room for it to swell, which causes pain," said Mr. Schleder.

When an athlete suffers a concussion, they aren't allowed to do certain activities that involve using the brain. The more the brain is used the more harmful it can be to the person with the concussion.

"I wasn't allowed to play video games or text. I basically couldn't do anything," said Hamel.

Now some concussions can be much more serious than Andrew Hamel's concussion. Junior Graham

Barton of RHS suffered a concussion recently as well.

"I got my concussion in a soccer practice, and I didn't realize it until a couple days later. I have had many before so my brain is weaker making it easier for me to get them," said Barton.

Barton, who has had concussions in his sports before, is going through his worst one yet.

"This is at least my second concussion, possibly my third since last February," said Barton

Barton, who suffered a concussion during team States for wrestling last year, blacked out for 20 minutes. This concussion was a pretty severe injury.

However, this concussion is part of the reason Barton is experiencing his worst concussion right now.

Barton experienced many of the symptoms of a more severe concussion when he got this one.

"I had a headache, nausea, sensitivity to light, trouble focusing, blurred vision and trouble remembering things," said Barton

Both Hamel and Barton had concussions but the difference is Hamel's was an in-game concussion.

When concussions happen in a game, there are certain precautions taken to evaluate that athlete to determine if he has a concussion.

"The athletes need to be removed from the game and coaches have procedures they follow to evaluate the athlete, who may have gotten the concussion," said Athletic Mr. Benoit.

However, the precautions for an athlete who may have suffered a concussion change over the years.

"Every year the coaches have a meeting on concussion awareness and education and rule changes in the sport," said Benoit.

If an athlete is taken out of a sporting event with suspicion of a possible concussion, then they aren't allowed to return to the athletic event.

After the player is taken out of the athletic event, the coaches have to evaluate them and go through a procedure they must follow to indicate if they have symptoms of a concussion. If the athlete does have symptoms of a concussion, then they aren't allowed to return to the event.

After the game the coaches are to notify parents of the athlete to let them know they may have sustained a possible concussion during the athletic event. After that, parents are to take the athlete to the doctors to have them further evaluated.

If the athlete has sustained a concussion, it can range from a minor concussion to a major concussion. If an athlete has a minor concussion, they will have to sit out from participation of the sporting event for a certain amount of time, and any other precautions recommended by the doctor.

If the concussion is a major one, the athlete will not be allowed to participate in the sport the athlete is currently in and will usually have to miss school for a certain amount of time like in Barton's concussion incident. Also the athlete who was concussed will have to prevent stimulating the brain as it can cause brain damage.

Other minor concussions like Hamel's, still take athletes out of their sport for a certain amount of time and if minor concussions aren't taken seriously, they can turn into major problems.

Baron of RHS suffered a concussion recently as well. "I got my concussion in a soccer practice, and I didn't realize it until a couple days later. I have had many before so my brain is weaker making it easier for me to get them," said Barton.

Barton, who has had concussions in his sports before, is going through his worst one yet.

"This is at least my second concussion, possibly my third since last February," said Barton

Barton, who suffered a concussion during team States for wrestling last year, blacked out for 20 minutes. This concussion was a pretty severe injury.

However, this concussion is part of the reason Barton is experiencing his worst concussion right now.

Barton experienced many of the symptoms of a more severe concussion when he got this one.

"I had a headache, nausea, sensitivity to light, trouble focusing, blurred vision and trouble remembering things," said Barton

Both Hamel and Barton had concussions but the difference is Hamel's was an in-game concussion.

When concussions happen in a game, there are certain precautions taken to evaluate that athlete to determine if he has a concussion.

"The athletes need to be removed from the game and coaches have procedures they follow to evaluate the athlete, who may have gotten the concussion," said Athletic Mr. Benoit.

However, the precautions for an athlete who may have suffered a concussion change over the years.

"Every year the coaches have a meeting on concussion awareness and education and rule changes in the sport," said Benoit.

If an athlete is taken out of a sporting event with suspicion of a possible concussion, then they aren't allowed to return to the athletic event.

After the player is taken out of the athletic event, the coaches have to evaluate them and go through a procedure they must follow to indicate if they have symptoms of a concussion. If the athlete does have symptoms of a concussion, then they aren't allowed to return to the event.

After the game the coaches are to notify parents of the athlete to let them know they may have sustained a possible concussion during the athletic event. After that, parents are to take the athlete to the doctors to have them further evaluated.

If the athlete has sustained a concussion, it can range from a minor concussion to a major concussion. If an athlete has a minor concussion, they will have to sit out from participation of the sporting event for a certain amount of time, and any other precautions recommended by the doctor.

If the concussion is a major one, the athlete will not be allowed to participate in the sport the athlete is currently in and will usually have to miss school for a certain amount of time like in Barton's concussion incident. Also the athlete who was concussed will have to prevent stimulating the brain as it can cause brain damage.

Other minor concussions like Hamel's, still take athletes out of their sport for a certain amount of time and if minor concussions aren't taken seriously, they can turn into major problems.

Richmond Continues Fighting Cancer

Continued from pg. 10

"It was just a fun thing to watch and see how many people enjoyed it watching."

Spencer Trapiss, a junior on the Blue Devils, had said the game had a huge effect on him. "Playing for my mom meant everything," Trapiss said. His mother battled cancer. "It's a good because we're raising money for research for cancer."

Having only a few BWAC games left, winning the Cancer Against Rivals game one last time meant everything to this year's seniors, hoping it will leave the team next year with an intense feeling for the cancer game next year and so on.

Cancer is becoming a larger issue everyday all around the world. For two small cities who have always been rivals come together to defeat the issue, it brings more people together.

Derek Wyatt, a senior at Richmond High School, is very supportive of his friends, especially during intense rivals games. "I think the Rivals Game is always the best game to watch," he said. "It goes for a better cause and plus, it's Armada." Wyatt attends every student section and every spirit day we have for that Friday making that game especially more exciting.

Raising money for cancer is not only good for our yearly cancer against rivals game, but also, all the money goes towards an even better matter.

When two teams come together, it makes everything going along with this event even better. This was the third year Richmond and Armada have had their support in our Rivalry game.

However, aside from the Rivals against Cancer game, the Richmond Blue devils pulled through with a victory winning 35-7, with touchdowns by Jake Schmidt, Bret Zihlavsky and Devin Skatzka.

All three, being the senior captains, knew what had to be done.

"We were on a mission," Bret Zihlavsky, a senior captain on the Blue Devils. Zihlavsky said he is proud of his team's achievements in this year's season.

Regarding the Cancer Awareness Game, Zihlavsky added that winning is great and one of the best feelings in the world, but Cancer awareness is obviously way more important than winning.

Andrew Hamel, a linebacker, recently suffered a minor concussion.

The Blue Devil's Advocate

October 24, 2014

Continued: Fútbol Fever in Richmond: Soccer squad finishes near the top in BWAC

Continued from pg. 10

Brandon Pirrone made the second goal for Richmond which lead both teams into overtime which concluding with New Haven winning.

The Blue Devils had fallen short.

"We played well; it just didn't go our way and that is something that every team and athlete will have to experience," said senior left outside-mid Ben Koohan, another one of the team captains.

Although the Blue Devils fell short in Districts, they finished strong in the BWAC, finishing in second place.

Saturday October 11, the Richmond Blue Devils took on the Inlay City Spartans hoping for a win to take first in the BWAC. The team as a whole came out strong and determined.

The first half of the game the Spartans had scored; the Devils were not able to score the entire game.

The outcome of the game was 2-0; the Inlay City Spartans had gotten the title for first place in the BWAC while Richmond finished second.

"I felt as if we were going to perform better; the rain had a negative impact on us when we versed Inlay City the first time," said sophomore center-mid Matt Schuster. "They scored early on us; it put them up on an early lead."

The Blue Devils played the Almont Raiders on Wednesday, October 8. Going into the first half, VanGorp scored; this gave the team some confidence throughout the game. During the second half, Almont tied it up 1-1. The game ended as a tie in both the books for Richmond and Almont.

Going into the game on Monday, October 6, up against Inlay City, the Blue Devils BWAC record had been 9-0 and the team had only let up one goal the entire season in the BWAC.

Coming out of the Inlay City game, the Blue Devils record was now 9-1; Inlay City won 3-0. The boys' undefeated record had come to an end.

"We're a team; we win together and lose together. We get nervous easily; we come out slow in the first half and come out hard in the second, we needed to change that," said sophomore right outside-mid Robert Trombley.

Overcoming from the first loss of the season was difficult, but so was overcoming the new strategies of a new coach,

Mr. Whitney.

"He pushes us to our limit and expects a lot out of us," said Koohan. "He inspires us to not give up."

Having a new coach changed the entire team; no coach has the same coaching strategies as one another.

"He brought along a lot of work ethic to the team," said Brad. "With his new strategies, like man marking, it improved our team and led us to succeed more."

Koohan saw the team working well together.

"Our team holds a lot of chemistry; a lot of us are close and we all know our strengths and weaknesses," said Koohan. Being close as a team is always an advantage. They can count on each other on and off the field.

The RHS varsity soccer team is losing three seniors this year: Brad Trombley, Ben Koohan and Conner Belham.

"I want to be remembered as a leader," said Brad, a captain. "Someone that people look up to."

Being a team captain brings along a lot of pressure because everyone counts on you, when you fail; you let your team down as well.

"I would encourage the returners for next season to work harder and push yourself past your limit," said Koohan. "Know your weaknesses and put extra time into them."

The Richmond Blue Devils' final BWAC record was 9-1-2.

"The best part for me this season was being undefeated for so long," said freshman right outside mid Kameron Klarich. "I'm looking forward to next season to get better not only as an individual but as a team."

The following season will be different with the seniors that are leaving, but all the players have a positive attitude toward next year.

"I think our season will be great and we will keep on improving," said Pirrone.

With having a team that is so experienced and dedicated toward the sport, and having a coach that is experienced with winning, the Blue Devils should be looking at another successful season ahead.

Cross Country Running Strong to the Finish

By: Paige Koehn
Features Co-Editor

Richmond High School's Cross Country team seems to be running in the positive direction. So far in the fall season, they have been working exceptionally hard to reach their fullest potential.

The season for Cross Country starts in mid-August and finishes in October. Within these months, the team competes with other schools in the county at different meets. The boys' and girls' team captains are seniors Beau Brockett, Blake Iskra, Madison Zarkowski and Hannah Tas. At every practice, both teams improve tremendously.

"My favorite thing about coaching Cross Country is seeing the improvement each athlete makes throughout the year," said Coach Brown, who was recently named BWAC girls Cross Country coach of the year.

Every day after school, practices are from about 4 to 5:30 PM. At practices, runners practice their skills in several ways. They do a variety of exercises to improve their stamina, such as warm ups and speed running. Within all of this, the boys' and girls' teams alike learned many beneficial lessons.

"One thing I learned is to push myself both physically and mentally. It keeps me motivated and passionate about things," said Brockett, a senior who has been participating in cross-country since his freshman year.

Within the sport of Cross Country, students' have been able to find a new confidence within them. Hannah Dulla, junior, said, "I've learned that Cross Country is just as much as a mental sport as it is a physical one. If you believe that you will do better you will."

For the boys' Cross Country team, this season has been all about setting improving on will also help us compete at a higher level at Districts," said Amhdar.

With several games left, Coach Amhdar, still believes her team can compete with any other team in the area.

Hannah Tas and Blake Iskra practice.

Along with hard work, the team also has a lot of fun.

One of the most memorable moments the boys' team has had this season was at the Holly Invite. At this race, they had a dance battle with another team to "Ice Ice Baby" by Vanilla Ice. No team necessarily won the dance battle, but, within this moment, the team was able to bond and have a great time together.

This season, the girls' team main goal is to do well in the BWAC and make it to States. In order to make it to States, the team must place in the top three. The girls' team placed 2nd in the BWAC. States will take place on November 1, 2014, at the MIS Speedway in Brooklyn, Michigan, where NASCAR races take place.

Many students, such as senior Hannah Tas, sophomore Carrie Maro, and freshman Madeline Yaek, have broken their personal records.

Hannah Tas broke a very hard record at RHS this season. During Cross Country, she was able to tie for fourth out of the five best times ever in a race during a season. She was able to run the time of 19:42. When Tas beat this record, she said that it was such an unreal and proud moment for her.

"I have improved a lot since last season," said Maro. "My new personal record is 22:16. When I beat my record, I was excited and it motivated me to get my time into the 20:1's."

Yaek, freshman, broke a school record this season. This year, she broke the best time for a freshman, which was a 20:54. Yaek was able to run the time of 20:46, her best so far.

"When I broke the record, I felt very happy. It helped boost my confidence going into a new school," said Yaek. "Members in my Dad's family have also broken records in the past, so now we have that in common."

At a BWAC meet, which took place on Tuesday, October 14, several seniors, earned a special award, a BWAC Honor. The two types an individual can earn are a Racing Honor, which is earned by finishing a race with a certain time, and an Academic Honor, which is earned by having a certain grade point average plus certain timing in a race.

The students' who received this award were Beau Brockett, Blake Iskra, Hannah Tas, Madison Zarkowski, Carrie Maro and Madeline Yaek.

For this year's Cross Country teams, the season has been a very rewarding one. Each team member has put a lot of dedication into the sport, and it most definitely shows.

Volleyball

Continued from pg. 9

start communicating better, and they need more drive.

The team has had their downs. Losing twice to Crosswell-Lexington, once to Armada and once to Yale, but Ward doesn't see it as all bad. "It never feels good, but it's all about how we played," she said.

Perseverance pays off, though. The team has beaten several other BWAC teams, including Inlay City and Almont, resulting in a pretty successful record of 7-5. The difference, Ward believes, in these games is that the team remained positive, communicated well, and played well overall.

With Districts approaching quickly, there's a lot to prepare for, especially Armada, one of the powerhouse teams of the BWAC. The Tiger team is led by two star players, who will be playing college volleyball.

The girls are working hard every day in practice and they believe this will help them succeed.

"The mental toughness we are

The Blue Devil's Advocate

October 24, 2014

Features

Homecoming Events Fire Up Richmond

By: Ashleigh Stier
Staff Writer

There are so many preparations in to making homecoming successful. Booking a DJ, decorating, and planning events and activities are just some of it. Student Government and the junior class are working hard to put this together at Richmond High School.

The theme for this year's Homecoming is "Haunted Homecoming." The dance will be decorated in a simple Halloween Theme. Orange and black are going to be colors in the gym. The DJ for this year's Homecoming is Vaux Adams. He has DJ'ed at many surrounding schools, like Armada and Memphis. This year he will be a guest at RHS's Homecoming.

Spirit Days are throughout the whole week. These days are: Staff Day, Generation Day, Twin Day, Tourist Day and Blue and White Day. Staff Day is where the students are supposed to dress as their favorite teacher. Allison Swanek, a junior, dressed as Mr. Delore. She wore a short-sleeved striped shirt with khakis and a Michigan baseball cap.

On Generation Day, ninth, tenth, and eleventh grade students dressed as little kids. Seniors dressed as senior citizens.

The staff members also participated by dressing like teenagers. Twin Day is for a student or staff member to dress alike with their friend. Rachel Leach and Maddie Teltow matched with a t-shirt and jeans. On Tourist Day, students dressed as tourists. Carolyn Schweiger wore a Disney shirt with leggings and long socks. She also wore a fanny pack with a camera hanging around her neck. Finally, Blue and White Day is for the school, as a whole, to wear blue and white. Leilah Cornelius will wear a Richmond hoodie with white pants. She also will paint lines on her face and put sparkles on the lines. Blue and white are RHS's school colors.

On Wednesday, there will be the Homecoming bonfire. Students will be able to attend this bonfire and hang out with friends. The bonfire will have at least over a hundred students attending. "NHS is helping with the bonfire by providing cider and donuts. The Richmond Community Band will also come play a few songs," Carolyn Schweiger said. Following the bonfire, on Friday is the Homecoming game.

Also on Friday, the homecoming parade will take place uptown. Each class will be carrying a banner they made to represent their class. Jessica Niebauer, sophomore, is making the banner for the sophomore class. She is writing "Haunted Homecoming" across the banner and drawing a zombie couple. She is trying to create a Halloween scene. This will take place before the game.

The Richmond Blue Devils will take on the Lutheran North Mustangs. The team has already been preparing already. The team has been staying focused and working hard at practice. "I am very confident that we can win," said Jake Stewart. Jake is a junior at RHS and this is his first Homecoming game he is playing in.

Jake added, "I am trying to keep calm because this is my first game but I am very excited and couldn't be anymore."

Friday's school day will run on an activity schedule. Each class will be cut seven minutes short. This will leave an extra hour at the end of the day for the Pep Assembly. The Pep Assembly will be held outside if the weather is nice. During the Pep Assembly the Homecoming representatives from each grade will participate in games to celebrate. Representing the freshmen are Megan Reece and Wesley Durkee, the sophomores are Owen Yannatter and Lauren Duche, the juniors are Matthew Poppe and Kylie McCloskey, and the senior representatives will be revealed on Friday. The students enjoy watching these activities. "We have categories for each event. There is a senior leader for the events also," senior, Carolyn Schweiger said. This is Carolyn's last homecoming at RHS. "It is very sad because it's my last Homecoming but exciting because I'll be spending it with my friends. I hope everyone is safe and that it is fun."

Continued on page 15

Feline Films Stir Internet Into a Cat Frenzy

By: Maximilian Leesch
Staff Writer

One gets stuck in between couch cushions and another simply fails to jump on a table. These are just a few of the shenanigans you will find these purrfect felines getting into.

And they are all found online.

Cats have been taking the world by storm with their fuzzy, adorable selves and have made a lasting impact on the internet. This cat frenzy has recently been a staple of the virtual world, but felines have been a trend on film for over 100 years.

This trend has been growing at a rapid pace since the internet existed, but it all started with a film short called "The Sick Kitten" by George Albert Smith that was made in 1903. This short inspired people to take part in their own frisky motion pictures which became an exciting phenomenon for cat lovers such as Breanna Jutila.

Breanna Jutila, senior, has been a feline fanatic for many years. "Since I was a kid, I've always had at least five cats in my house," said Jutila. From then on, she has made herself known as a "crazy cat lady" and has embraced the title.

Cats have made a large impact on Jutila's life, and the existence of cat videos has only made that impact even larger. "They're adorable and no matter what, they love you," said Jutila. This passionate love for cats by Jutila and others like her are why cat are videos so popular.

Jutila says that cat people tend to stay inside more than dog people, primarily to watch more cat videos. Not only are these videos the cat's pajamas to folks like Jutila, but a way of life. "I would say that the cat lover community is a cult," said Jutila. Although some stay indoors, staying inside doesn't keep some kitty-crazed fans from a cat video festival in Minnesota.

The Internet Cat Video Festival is held annually at the Walker Art Center in Minneapolis and has attracted cat lovers from all walks of life like catnip to the event. At the festival, patrons can spend their time pawing over their favorite videos as well as watch some on a massive projector screen. "That sounds absolutely beautiful," said Jutila, adding that she will probably go next year.

Among the favorite cat videos of Jutila is a video in which cats' meows are autotuned to make a catchy pop song. She also enjoys the videos that simply show off their silliness. She says that if you're having a bad day, you can count on watching the simplicity of cats' lives to cheer you up. "They're just hilarious and everyone loves cats," said Jutila.

Jutila has even filmed her own cats as a homage to the rulers of the internet. She has a few videos of her cats sliding on a Pledge-gleazed floor and playing with toys, and even a few of her cats just meowing and being adorable. Even though she has none of her videos on the internet, she keeps plenty of them on her phone.

Many other people enjoy cats and their videos, such as senior Alexa Dickinson. "Cats do funny things and people who own cats cat relate," said Dickinson on the videos, adding that they are also whimsical and cute. However, Dickinson doesn't have any of her own cats, and isn't a big fan of their videos as she fancies herself a sloth video liker over cat videos. Nonetheless, cat videos never cease to make most internet-goers feel a little fuzzy inside.

A few cat video stars have really come into the spotlight, becoming internet celebrities. Among these feline A-listers are Lil Bub, Princess Monster Truck, Maru and the late Colonel Meow. While not all cats on the internet land on all fours when it comes to superstardom, they are still appreciated by the citizens of the virtual world and certainly have more than nine lives.

When that kitten finds its way out from in between the couch cushions and the other finally makes it onto the table, you can be sure the internet will be waiting with open arms filled with catnip and toy mice. "Cats are the mascots of life," said Jutila, "and the internet."

Show us Your Stuff!

Max Leesch

Sydney Johnson

Kaitlyn Milliken

Features

October 24, 2014

Features

The iPhone Six: To Buy or Not to Buy?

By: Connor Hill

Every year, Apple releases a new phone. These phones cause anticipation around the world as all wait to see what Apple will have added to their newest invention.

People wait in long lines for days and spend large amounts of money in order to say they own the newest iPhone. They also enjoy showing others their new, exciting purchase.

The iPhone 6 is the latest release, following the long line of smartphones created by Apple.

Many people have already bought an iPhone, while others are waiting for their upgrade plan to provide them with the newest iPhone.

Joey Apigo and Brad Pedri were one of the first students that purchased an iPhone 6.

Pedri, a senior, went and got his the day it was released, while Apigo, also a senior, decided to wait a couple days and then get it.

They were both equally excited about their new iPhone and couldn't wait to show it to others.

"One of the benefiting factors of the new iPhone is that it is faster than my old one," Apigo said.

Apigo and Pedri got their phones as part of their upgrade plan provided to them by their cellular provider. They both enjoy the big screen, as it is beneficial when using apps and reading.

"Another great thing about the iPhone 6 is that it is a lot more fun to play apps on it," Pedri said.

Apigo added that the size of the screen made it easier to play games as well.

Even though they are happy with their purchase of the iPhone 6, Apigo and Pedri are glad they didn't get the iPhone 6+.

"The 6+ is too big and costs too much," Apigo said. "I didn't see the point in wasting my money on something like that."

Pedri agrees.

"The 6+ is almost the size of my head. Why would I want a phone that big?" Pedri said.

Although they aren't happy with the 6+, Apigo and Pedri agree that the iPhone 6 is a must-have.

"Why recommend it to others?" Joey said. "Why not?"

Not everyone is as excited about the iPhone 6 as Apigo and Pedri are.

Mr. Roodbeen, science teacher, isn't too keen on the newest iPhone. He doesn't understand why people feel the need to purchase unnecessary items.

Mr. Roodbeen has an iPhone 4s and likes it the way it is. He doesn't understand why people would want a big phone that can easily bend.

"I'm happy with the one that I have now," Mr. Roodbeen said. "I'm not a big phone person any ways."

Continued on page 15

Richmond Welcomes New Art Teacher

By: Lauren Duche
Staff Writer

When Mrs. Belf walked through the doors of RHS for the first time, she never knew the impact she would make. Mrs. Belf is the new Art teacher at RHS and has been teaching for 24 years.

She's a proud graduate of Central Michigan University in Wayne County. She graduated with two majors, one in Art and the other in English.

Her very first year as a teacher, she was an English teacher. Ever since then, though, she's strictly been an art teacher.

"I have a major in English, but I have a passion for art that I don't have for English," she said. Mrs. Belf spent 23 years of her career teaching at Eastpointe High School in Eastpointe. After 23 years, however, she felt it was time for a change, and Richmond was the perfect place.

"I wanted to teach at a smaller school. I wanted to know every student personally as I walked through the halls," Mrs. Belf said.

Mrs. Belf loves teaching at RHS and says the faculty and student body has been more than helpful with everything. She said, "Even though I loved teaching at Eastpointe, I only knew the teacher in the next room. Here, though, teachers from the middle school are welcoming me."

As the only art teacher at RHS, things can get stressful. However, her current and former students inspire her to make the program better every year.

At the moment her vision for the art program would be to get more display cases for her students. This way every student gets a chance to display their art around the school instead of just in the art and theatre wing.

Chelsea Kattelman, junior, said, "I want display cases as much as Mrs. Belf does, maybe more. I want more than just my classmates to see my artwork. I want everyone to see what I've accomplished."

Mrs. Belf and her students want to have more space and more display cases so everyone can see their accomplishments. Mrs. Belf said, "My teaching philosophy is that the end result isn't what matters. It's the hard work and time you spent to get that end result."

Another goal Mrs. Belf wishes to achieve in her time here at RHS is to get an AP art program. "At Eastpointe we had an AP art program and the students loved it. Having the AP program would push my students to their full potential," Mrs. Belf said. "Having an AP program could help students who want to pursue a career in art."

This year, Mrs. Belf wants to get some of her students' artwork into the Scholastic Art Show for high school students. Her main goal is to get at least three of her students artwork into the show.

Mrs. Belf also wants to accomplish senior murals or

Photos courtesy of RHS Yearbook

Would You Rather?

- Would you rather have Cheetos for fingers for the rest of your life or have a popcorn kernel stuck in your throat for the rest of your life?
Odin Defazio: Cheetos for fingers

- Would you rather have legs as long as fingers or fingers as long as legs?
Elizabeth Kulman: Legs as long as fingers

- Would you rather only be able to whisper or only be able to shout?
Jaret Gil: Shout

- Would you rather have a head the size of a tennis ball or a head the size of a watermelon?
Danielle Hunt: Watermelon

★ Star Student of the Month

Beth Beinditt

Favorite subject: Math

Favorite activity outside of school: Playing sports & hanging out with friends and family

Role model: Her brother, Tom

Favorite thing about high school: See-

Beau Brockett

Favorite subject: English

Favorite activity outside of school: Running and playing piano

Role model: His parents

Favorite thing about high school: Seeing his friends and learning about different subjects.